

Building Safety Together

At ATASK, our advocates, attorneys, and shelter staff support survivors in moments of crisis, when safety is urgent and support is critical, and remain alongside them as they rebuild their lives.

At the same time, our Outreach and Community Engagement team works in the community to raise awareness, build connection, and strengthen systems of care. Across Massachusetts, we partner with Asian and immigrant communities to expand access to resources and ensure survivors know where to turn. We meet people where they are - in community centers, places of worship, restaurants and groceries, healthcare settings, and schools - making support visible, accessible, and grounded in language and culture.

Our work extends further through education and systems change. ATASK provides trainings for universities, healthcare providers, law enforcement, faith leaders, and community organizations, equipping professionals with the tools to respond to domestic violence in culturally responsive ways and strengthening the broader network of care for survivors.

We also advocate for policies that advance language access, immigrant justice, and survivor safety. These priorities are shaped directly by what we hear from survivors and families, ensuring that systems reflect their needs and experiences.

Together, our direct services, community engagement, trainings, and policy work go hand in hand to support survivors and strengthen the communities and systems they rely on.

Because building safety takes all of us showing up - together, consistently, for one another.

Showing Up Matters

Over the past few weeks, our community has come together through ATASK's Power of Showing Up campaign sharing stories, posting videos, and reminding one another that safety begins with presence.

Showing up can look like many things: learning about prevention, sharing resources at a community event, advocating for language access, or standing beside survivors as they rebuild their lives.

This is the power of showing up: when we do it consistently for our communities and one another, change becomes possible.

ATASK's Impact: 2025 Annual Report

At ATASK, showing up means being there when it matters, and staying as survivors rebuild.

In Fiscal Year 2025 (July 2024 – June 2025), ATASK served 1,046 survivors and their children across Massachusetts and New England, each one navigating complex challenges and working toward safety and stability.

From securing safe housing and accessing legal representation to providing emotional support and economic empowerment, this work reflects both the resilience of survivors and the importance of having the right support at the right time.

Our 2025 Annual Report offers a closer look at the impact we're making together to ensure all families have the opportunity to live with safety, stability, and dignity.

Silk Road Gala – Save the Date

Every day, ATASK works alongside survivors and families helping them find safety, build stability, and move toward independence.

On September 19, we invite you to come together with us for an evening of community, celebration, and impact.

The Silk Road Gala is a chance to honor the strength of survivors, celebrate the partnerships that make this work possible, and recognize the collective effort it takes to build safer, more connected communities.

Join us as we gather in support of Asian and immigrant families and reaffirm our shared commitment to safety, dignity, and opportunity for all.

Mark your calendar. More details, including tickets and sponsorship opportunities, will be shared soon.

Together, we show up. And together, we build safety.

This Mother's Day, Honor a Mother

Celebrate the courage, love, and resilience of mothers and the important women in your life while supporting survivors rebuilding their lives.

Make a gift in honor of a mother or someone meaningful in your life, and we'll send a personalized tribute card to your honoree. You can also write a short, heartfelt note directly to a survivor creating a meaningful connection and real impact.
